

Efficiency Tip

Sue Kay

Take advantage of web-based resources...

When it comes to managing a busy and thriving medical practice, quality information is critical. In the past, you often had to order books/publications on practice management topics, wait for them to arrive and then find time to actually read them.

Today, the internet provides access to so much information that you can readily find what you are looking for when you are looking for it – and get it instantly!

From a practice-management perspective, the AMA is a great resource for you. Visit their “Solutions for Managing Your Practice” portal frequently. It’s a wealth of great information.

<http://www.ama-assn.org/ama/pub/physician-resources/solutions-managing-your-practice.shtml>

I’ve been a regular reader of “Medical Economics” for years and, while I love the physical magazine, I’ve also found having access to the electronic magazine to be very helpful – especially when I’m researching a topic for our Efficiency in Practice readers. You might find the no-charge access to this electronic magazine helpful as well.

<http://medicaleconomics.modernmedicine.com/memag/issue/issueDetail.jsp?id=17722>